ICD-10 is a positive and necessary transition.

We're all feeling the pressure and some panic over the impending October 1, 2015 deadline, but this is a beneficial and necessary transition. ICD-10 has been around since 1992, and the US is one of the last countries to adopt the new codes.

- Practices can expect higher reimbursements. More information on diagnosis and treatments results in higher repayments.
- Your staff does not need to learn every code. Focus on the codes relevant to your specialty or practice. And lookup tools will help with the process.
- Your Practice Management software will help find issues prior to submission.
- With access to more detailed data, physicians can improve diagnosis and outcomes.

Ensure the success of your transition.

If you're not prepared for the October 1, 2015, ICD-10 deadline, the transition may overwhelm your resources and put your business at financial risk. Every billing company and medical practice should make it a priority to ensure the success of their transition by enlisting the aid of an expert coder such as Dell Coding Services. Using Dell Coding Services to help during your transition does not replace your current coding staff. It supplements your staff when they need it the most with experienced ICD-10 coders.
